Since 1979, Market Street Inn has been an icon on the river in downtown Salisbury

Beginning in the 60's, the lonely, box shaped building was known as "The Huddle," a little sports bar owned by Baltimore Colts players. On to the late 70's, the little box switched hands, and was first called Market Street Inn. Outside, the box was brightened up with a pink coat of paint, and inside they served $2 margaritas, enchiladas, and burritos.

In 1989 a local couple purchased Market Street and created an open air sandwich shop. They lost the pink paint and added the popular floating dock. The tables were donned with mini golf pencils for their infamous check off menu, where customers would check to order overstuffed, build your own sandwiches.

Within the past seven years, now owner, and president Rob Mulford has transformed the establishment into a true dining experience. Adding the outside boardwalk and courtyard for summer dining, and glassing in the indoor porch for a comfortable winter dinner.

Market Street Inn is now known for it's extensive wine selection, gourmet culinary conception, and superb service, while still maintaining a casual local flair. In 28 years MSI has evolved from a little, open air sandwich shop and bar, to a casually upscale restaurant and pub. Rob instills in his staff his mission of...

"good food, good service, in a clean environment"
